The exercises at the ninth academic commencement of the Register's Female Institute, New York, were very interesting. From the opening song we copy the first and last Stanzas : What sounds are those so gently stealing, Like some far off vesper chime? Can it be sagness, thus revealing, Memories of departed time? List we! do they seem to say, Brightest days shall pass away? The sky is bright above us, The world is gay and fair; And myriad voices breathe of joy, Upon the perfumed air.

> "Yet every spirit-tone is telling That the hour has come to part; Each fond remembrance witdly swelling Every chord within the heart. Whence this sadness? who may tell? Ah, 'tis in that word farewell! The true hearts beating round us, Will cheer our future yet; The links of love that bound us,

We never can forget. The parting song was also charmingly song by the pupils. The words are as follows:

> Chant we now a mournful anthem, Now a parting song we bring; Blend once more our youthful voices, While a dirge-like song we sing, Tears are from our eyelids flowing, Wildly throbs each saddened heart! Sisters, from these scenes we're going; Sisters, we are doomed to part. Softly swell the plaintive numbers, Gently on the breeze they float, Grief is waking from its slumbers, Breathing from each trembling note; Gone are now fair childhood's hours, With the laughing lip and brow, From our path have fled the flowers; Woman's lot is on us now. Sisters, we have walked together, 'Neath the skies of sunny years; In the dim and mystic future, Lies there not a vale of tears? Yet the star of Faith will guide us, O'er our spirits cast a spell, Lead us to a fairer heaven, Never more to breathe farewell.
